Italy to the sentence occurring in to the Democratic Superintend-chestion in Georgia, Mr. Blau-y should not the bill become a Emphlican party, he said, was it; many able and distinguished is were in favor of it; President had declared the necessity of for popular education as this I had declared the necessity of g for popular education as this. There was nothing to hinder it, except the opposition of those id up in this country an opposing the nerochial school system—to the up in this country an opposing—the parochial school system—to ruction of the schools of the counce spoke of those who "are engaged that in open machinations against and who comprehend how, if this assed, it will give a great future of the to the public schools." hentership of ten millions, it is between the less an assertion by mature of its all to the education of their children in rather non-sectarian schools. But more of that hereafter, if necessary. Occasionally i am obliged to let out a little which piller obliges me generally to suppress. This buil, if it is to fail, will have been helded by packed committees, the individual members of which have been threatened by anathemas from their church if they venture to support it. And I give notice to those who propose to kill has bill by indirection and by fraud and by tracks unworthy of any other lobby around the Capitol that they have blows to receive as well as blows to give. This country is not to be given over to those who would beach civil allegiance elsewhere than within our own borders primarily, and substantiary civil allegiance only to the United States. I speak of but a faction of the great body of our citizons; for the masses of that same body of American citizens are true to the flag and do not propose to elect a President who resides on the banks of the Tiber.

Taking up the report of school superintendents in Tennessee, Mr. Riair remarked (in a tone of sarcasm) that he supposed that the senators from that State would be in the chamber in a week or two. At all events, what he said would be all in the Record. No matter what the press did the Senate had the Record—that glorious little paper of their own. If he should be returned to the Senate for the next thirty or forty years, he meant to make an effort to have the Congressional Record distributed to the people of the United State gratuitously to the number of at least 500,000. The Senate needed the paper. If it published a paper itself and circulated it gratuitously it could reach the people with the truth, but not until them. The private press, said he, that runs only for its own emolument, and has to make money, and that leaves out the most truth—especially if it is unpalatable—is a poor press to rely upon. This great American presso fours is the source of more mischief in the country than there would be if we had no press at all. There may come the time when a dog-fight will not be more important in the opinion of this press than great school bills, but that time has not been reached. Coming back to the statement which be had been about to read, as to the the condition of the public schools in Tennessee, he expressed the wish that some page would notify the Tennessee senators of what he was going to read. His remarks having been suspended so as to allow a message to be received from the House, Mr. Blair expressed the hope that he would not be interrupted any more by such small matters. [Laughter.]

Mr. Dolph asked him if he would yield for a motion for an executive session.

Mr. Bair: Oh, no! Unless I am obliged to. I have got only two days left. Exe-

Mr. Doiph did not insist on the motion for an executive session, and Mr. Blair went on with the reading of reports and letters as to the illiteracy in the South— commenting upon them as he went along. Finally at 4:45 he yielded for Mr. Dolph's motion, and after an executive session the Senate, at 5:30, adjourned.

Mr. Butterworth, of Ohio, from the Committee on Patents, presented a favorable report upon the bill providing for the approximation of the part of the providing for the part of the part Instrial Conference at Madrid, Spain,

The House then, at 5:35, adjourned.

Congress, and who has for several terms paid so much attention to river-and-harbor matters, said to the Dispatch correspondent to-day that the Richmond delegation opened the eyes of most of the members of the committee, and he declared that if the country contiguous to James river had the coal, iron ore, and limestone deposits mentioned by Mr. Gay that it would not be many years before Richmond would go to the front as a great manufacturing centre. He was also pleased with Colonel Ruffin's remarks regarding the plan of miprovement proposed for the river. The committee, Mr. Blanchard felt certain, would deal liberally with James river, although the appropriation might not be as large as that asked for by the Engineer in his estimates, and mentioned by Colonel Ruffin-viz., $400,000, to be expended during the next fiscal year.

REPUBLICAN MEMBERS.

Some of the Republican members of the committee have also expressed gratifying surprise at the claims made for Richmond, and it can be stated that while they will naturally look out for the projects in Republican districts to a greater extent, they will at least give James river enough to continue the improvement, Mr. Bowden being a member of the committee the Norfolk harbor and other projects in his district will be well taken care of.

Washington, February 19.—The President to-day nominated William F. Bowers Supervisor of Census for the Second Georgia district.

The majority and minority reports in the Atkinson es. Pendleton election contest from the Fourth West Virginia district were submitted to the House to-day by Messrs. Rowell and O'Ferrall, respectively. Mr. Rowell reviews with great minuteness the votes upon which the contest is based, and reached the conclusion that Atkinson should have been given a majority of seven instead of Pendleton mineteen. Mr. O'Ferrall makes an equally exhaustive review of the circumstances connected with the votes which are contested, with the result that he finds that Pendleton, the sitting member, is entitled to a majority of twenty-five votes instead of ninteen, as shown on the face of the returns.

The following particulars have been learned of the Hill-Hogan shooting affair in Bedford county. Hill resides in Amherst, but owns a farm in Bedford that Hogan lives on. Some time ago Hill sent word to Hogan to move off his place, and on going up there yesterday found that Hogan had not obeyed the order. Hill went to the house, and, meeting Hogan, they both drew pistols and commenced firing. After four shots apiece neither was hit, and Hill went to a house near by, grabbed a musket loaded with buckshot, and fired on Hogan, shooting him in the shoulder and head. It is thought now that Hogan is not fatally hurt. Both claim that they acted in self-actence. Hill is about seventy years of age.

It is reported that John Kirk, who recently purchased the gold-mine in Montgomery county for $15,000, sold a half-interest in the same a few days ago for $100,000.

He seemed much surprised to find me there, but greeted me in a friendly manner and walked over to the court-house, where I went to make some inquiry about a venire for jurors for the United States Court. At dinner-time he returned and invited me and Captain Allison, who was present, to dine with him at the hotel. We accepted the invitation. Soon after dinner McFarlin invited me to take a drive with him that evening, but I declined. We then left the hotel, and on the street met Saunders and Langford. McFarlin urged Saunders to come in and dine with him, but Saunders replied that he had been to dinner. McFarlin then said that he Saunders must take a drive with him. I called Saunders away and took him to his room, where I told him that I had every reason to believe that there was a plot to murder him, and that he must pay no attention to the pretence of friendship, but let these men alone and remain in his room until I returned, as I was going out into the country and would be absent a couple of hours, and was absent about three hours. On my return I went to Saunders's room, but he was gone. I asked Deputy Langford, who was there, where Saunders was, and he said he did not know, but he was afraid he had been decoyed away as the last he saw of him he was with McFarlin. I went over to the court-house and there found the Sheriff of Gadsden country, who had arranged to accompany Saunders and his prisoner to Pensacola, and asked if he knew where Saunders was. He said he did not know; that Saunders told him he was going to take a drive into the country and would be back at 4 o'clock.
